

Milestone 3:

Narrative:

In the time that we have coded this project, we have found many things that have been hard/easy.

Good:

- Making blocks (a lot of this has come from Breakout, a lot of the hitboxes and sizing)
- Background (was taken directly from the Bubble Blitz and slightly changed to be more platform-like)
- The logic behind lives and the score system came from early versions of Breakout and other projects
- Overall, in this early version, it has been easy in terms of grabbing things

Challenges:

- Making the movement (tried starting from breakout)
- Glitches on the platforms and the hitbox of enemies (at times our hitboxes would not align or do what we wanted to do, an example of this would be the early version of movement/jumping)

Revised Plan:

As we have made progress so far, our revised plan is now to make only the 1-liner level. All that is left for us to do is to work on making a bigger canvas that follows the main character, and add obstacles for the player to evade with enemies sprinkled through. With the time we have, we want to polish a really solid one level.